"Hooper," one of these remarked, "is a far greater outfielder than he has been given credit for being. He can go in any direction, he has a wonderful arm, and not even Speaker has finer judgment. If Tris has any outfield defensive rival in the game, Hooper is undoubtedly the man.'

As for Coincidences.

Dear Sir: A bit of coincidence. The standing of the clubs in the correct order. The theme might be elaborated, but you will see the point at a glance. The first division gives you the winners of the last four years. The last team to win before the Giants was Chicago, now in fifth place, and before Chicago came Pittsburgh, now in sixth place. These six, in fact, include all the teams that have won the pennant in the present circuit. Tied at the foot of the league come Cincinnati and take a hunch from this apparent game of rotation and consider this an omen that Cincinnati will rise to the top next year and crowd the rest

Only three pitchers in baseball history have won five world series games. They are Mathewson, Bender and Coombs. Coombs has the best record, with five wins against no defeats. Matty has five victories and five defeats, while Bender s against no defeats. Matty has he victories and nive defeats, while Bender is five victories and three defeats. Matty's greatest setback came in 1912 ainst the Red Sox, when he failed to win a game out of three starts, and yet lowed but one earned run.

Speaking of rugged schedules, how about Tufts with Harvard one Saturday de Princeton the next? What other hard games have you?
